

Dr Giovanna Piga is an architect and a Lecturer in Architecture, Contemporary Design, Architectural History and Theory at Coventry University. She has previously taught Architecture, Landscape and Urban Design, History and Theory of Architecture, Architectural Drawing and Topography of Rome at British and North American universities. Her research focuses on Waterfront and City Studies, Urban Design, Urban Regeneration looking at the role of waterfront design in small port towns, adaptive re-purpose, public spaces within the contemporary city, integration of contemporary design within historical/archaeological contexts, urban regeneration of marginal and deprived areas, rapid urbanisation and city resilience. Educated in Rome and in the UK, she began her career in practice, designing and coordinating a variety of projects and design competitions for which she was awarded first prizes and finalists.