

Architect, Director of the Scientific Committee of RETE. Former Member of Port Network Authority of the Central Tyrrhenian Sea, he is Director of the Institute for Research on Innovation and Services for Development (IRISS) of the National Research Council (CNR) of Italy where he coordinates an interdisciplinary working group, strongly rooted in the territory, which collaborates with research centres, universities, institutions and associations, in Italy and abroad. His research activity is focused on sea and port cities with particular attention to the public dimension of sea and waterfront as common goods. The action research activity is accompanied by an intense activity of public engagement in urban regeneration and local development projects, with particular attention to the theme of maritime identity as a driver for urban regeneration.